ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

[0053]   An integrated circuit designed to be coupled to a suspendable memory, the integrated circuit comprising a memory enable deassertion delay (MEDD) logic setting a wait period for the deassertion of a memory enable signal after completion of a memory operation. The wait period is chosen for a preferred latency versus power savings tradeoff.